Gary Crittenden joined Citigroup in March 2007 as Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer. As CFO he was responsible for the financial management of the company during a challenging environment and successfully reduced expenses and assets. He also managed Citi's re-engineering efforts as head of Strategy and M&A as well as Productivity and Re-engineering.

Gary took on the newly formed operational role of Chairman of Citi Holdings in March 2009. As Chairman he works to optimize the value of the businesses in this unit, which represents a significant portion of the assets of Citigroup. Gary is also a member of Citi's Senior Leadership and Executive Committees.

Prior to joining Citigroup, Gary was Chief Financial Officer of American Express, Monsanto, and Sears Roebuck. He began his career as a consultant at Bain & Company where he worked on a wide range of strategic projects in the United States and Germany. Gary holds a degree in Management from Brigham Young University and an MBA from Harvard University. He and his wife Catherine reside in New Canaan, Connecticut and have three children and eight grandchildren.
